

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

William L. Murphy grew up in northern New York State, where his parents interested him in birdwatching at the age of four by showing him a Least Bittern. Since then his birding travels have taken him throughout North America and the Caribbean. He leads birding tours for the Smithsonian Institution, the Audubon Naturalist Society of Washington, and the Maryland Ornithological Society, as well as for other tour companies. When not travelling Mr. Murphy operates Peregrine Enterprises, Inc., an international birding tour company, and works for the federal government as a technical information specialist and computer programmer.

Mr. Murphy and his family live in Lanham, Maryland.

A Birder's Guide to Trinidad and Tobago

by William L. Murphy
1986